Robert McDaniels, 56, coach/founder of MacCanDo Tenderloin Youth Track Club (which teaches at-risk youth ages 5 to 12 to run), Vallejo, CA (wearing purple shirt above and below). Kezar regular for 25 years; runner for more than 35. Here—with wife, Yuko—to teach the kids:

“I came from domestic violence. My dream was to have a track club so no kid would experience what I experienced. We teach them, ‘No guns, no drugs, and no means no.’ If anything is going on, they should talk to me about it. I tell the kids, ‘If you have a heart, you can be a runner. It’s really hard to come out of the darkness, but the only way to achieve something is to try.’ Parents get out there and run, too. To feel a part of a family environment like this—I never had that as a kid. We only had school and the projects. MacCanDo is the baby of Kezar. All the other clubs on the track know Mac kids. When the kids run, everybody has something beautiful to say to them.”
